DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1-9 and 18 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Blaettner et al. [US 5,497,039] in view of Irwin et al. and Japan 358054606.

Blaettner et al. discloses a coil [26] for an electric machine comprising:

- multiple windings [figure 1]; and
- an epoxy powder resin coating [132] applied to the coil layers.

Blaettner et al. disclose the instant claimed invention except for: the powder resin specifically having a dielectric strength of 1000-1500 v/mil for use in a turbine generator.

Japan 358054606 discloses a coating for a coil of an electric machine formed of a silicon powder resin having a high dielectric strength.

It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to use the coating composition of Japan 358054606 for Blaettner et al., as modified, for the purpose of enabling the coil to withstand the operating environment of a field coil.

Irwin et al. discloses a generator having a winding with a high voltage power coating.

Art Unit: 2832

It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made that a coated winding with a power coating having a high dielectric strength and heat withstand could have been used in a generator, as suggested by Irwin et al., for the purpose of protecting the generator windings.

Regarding claim 3, it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to not coat the end connection portions of the winding in order to provide a good electrical connection.

Regarding claim 8, to add additional coatings would have been obvious for the purpose of improving wear characteristics.

The specific materials used to form the coils would have been an obvious design consideration based on the specific operating environment and loads.

Response to Arguments

3. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1, 3-9 and 18 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
